We carry the essence of Nepal its culture, kindness, and courage in everything we do. From the warmth of our service to the red and blue of our wings, Nepal's spirit flies with us.

As Nepal's national airline, we fly with responsibility blending tradition with innovation, ensuring safety, sustainability, and pride in every mile.

Every flight is more than travel it's an ascent. We uplift comfort, hospitality, and trust, making every journey as breathtaking as the Himalayas.

We connect people, families, and cultures. Whether it's Kathmandu to Tokyo or a traveler's first step into Nepal, we bridge hearts and horizons.

Based On Target Diagram

- Connection through families and heritage.
- Taglines and headlines should say something more than just “take a trip with us,” etc.
- What is the spirit of Nepal? What does that look like?

Ground, Clouds/Sky, and Mountains is what the logo is. Is the Nepal experience one of the Ground, Clouds, and Mountains?

Transitioning Branding

It appears as though this brand is much more professional than The Mammoth Site (that I am currently working on) is. This is going to be interesting because I will have to shift my thinking to be more professional and find ways to elevate this brand that aren't the same ways I created the brand for the Mammoth Site.

it showed up in more places and the meaning was more obvious. Perhaps using the elements in the logo would help to make everything feel a bit more unified.

Utilizing The Logo

I had the designer of this system explain the logo to me, and I think this is a super clever idea how he built the logo. I just wish

Learning Summary

Brand Gap

One of the biggest things that I saw when I was looking at other websites was pictures of locations or parts of experiences. I think this is what is missing from the brand. A lot of the marketing material is great, but without strong visuals on the website, people won't know why they want to travel or why Nepal Airlines is different from other services. I am going to try to bring lots of visuals into the website so that people not only find what they are looking for, but leave feeling like they want to travel somewhere, even if they were not quite serious about it before coming onto the website.

Nepal Airlines Reputation

There were also a lot of examples of websites that had small portions of useful information. When I was looking at the current website layout, I noticed it had those sections like "savings" and "download the app." I need to make this more obvious and enticing for users that come onto the site. I also think that there should be an area that explains why Nepal Airlines is different and better than other airlines because it will help strengthen their appearance, and provide the customers with an opportunity to get to know and hopefully trust the brand/company.

Website Elements

When I revisited the website, I noticed a couple things about it that I wasn't doing that I could add. Instead of a Q & A section on the main page, quick links would be more helpful because it would take them to more general information they might need. I also got feedback and noticed that I needed a reward or exciting element that might get the customers hooked and more involved with the brand. I will try to play around with it and see what I come up with.

Hero Image GIF

While I didn't include it in my process (since GIFS take up a lot of space), I made sure that the hero image became the main GIF so that customers/users would become more interested in Nepal, or perhaps even develop a small desire to go there at first glance. This also strengthens the tagline that follows the series of pictures and tagline statements, of experiencing the Spirit of Nepal.

Pictures

At first, I started utilizing the more stock-looking photos because they reminded me more of typical airport photos. However, I got feedback that this made the experience feel more fake and less genuine. Since my main goal was strengthen the brand through stronger visuals/pictures, I knew I had to pivot. Since the brand is all about the Spirit of Nepal, I chose to replace most of my current pictures with pictures of Nepal. This strengthened both the visual interest, and the brand story and appeal.

Website Elements

I add the “Wear The Spirit Of Nepal” section because I saw that I had a gap that needed some excitement. I thought this would go well under the quick links since everything else above would be things that the customer would most likely need before wanting to know about special offers.

Translation To The Mammoth Site Rebrand

Since I was nearly finished with the Mammoth Site rebrand when I did this project, it was very interesting to apply what I had learned while doing that project to this one. I know that one of my first thoughts when I looked at this brand was how is Nepal Airlines different from others? What makes them unique? What is their certain quirk that makes them relatable, run, or interesting?

The phrase, “The Spirit Of Nepal” was interesting in that regard because while it was fascinating, it was never truly defined. At first I thought my job may have been to define it, but then I realized that for Nepal Airlines, the “Spirit of Nepal” was experiencing Nepal. Everyone’s own experiences will speak to them; getting them there is the thing to focus on. That propelled a lot of my design choices and as I mentioned before, strong visuals and consistent graphics helped to connect the website to the other applications.
